

In medieval Europe, the relationship between the shape of the page and text block provided space for notes in the margin. In fact, even before printing margin notes are used to elaborate or further explain details. In this illustration we see a spread from the Liber insularum Archipelagi. with notes in the site margins

a leaf from the Chudleigh Bible, in Latin, illuminated manuscript on vellum - northeastern France, c.1220-30

In medieval Europe, the relationship between the shape of the page and text block provided space for notes in the margin. In fact, even before printing margin notes are used to elaborate or further explain details. In this illustration we see a spread from the Liber insularum Archipelagi with notes in the site margins

