OmniBook is based on the BookType system

The screenshot displays the OmniBook web interface. The top navigation bar is red and contains the text "OMNIBOOK" and the user name "Chris Jennings" with a dropdown arrow. The main content area has a header "Student Guide to Oxford" and a sub-header "Info". Below this is a rich text editor toolbar with options like "Insert", "Edit", "Tools", "Normal Text", "A", "16", "B", "I", "U", and "Quote". The main content area shows a photo of Carfax Tower in Oxford, with the caption "Carfax Tower" below it. The text describes the Oxford Castle Quarter, mentioning its history as a castle and prison, and its current use as a complex of modern restaurants and the Malmaison Hotel. The text is formatted with bold and italic tags. On the right side, there is a "Chapter History" sidebar with a table of revisions. The table has columns for the revision number, the user, the timestamp, and a "Restore" button. The revisions are listed in descending order of timestamp.

From Ads that dances

From ads that dance or sing to MTV-like commercials, online advertisers are now using a new type of technology ¹² called "rich media" to attract consumers.

U.S. Internet advertising revenue will have reached about $12 billion last year, up $3 billion from 2004. Of this, advertisers spent about $1 billion on rich media, up from $800 million in 2003, according to the Interactive ¹³ Advertising Bureau.

So what exactly is media? By definition, i It is an online advertising technique that combines graphics elements with audio technologies, giving Internet users an interactive experience. And with more than half ¹⁴ of American households connected online and using high-speed connections like broadband and DSL , it means a potentially lucrative way for online advertisers to get consumers' attention.

One company taking online advertising to a different level is Centale Inc. (OTCBB: CNTL), based in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. The online marketing and technology firm offers cutting-edge technology solutions to its clients.

Centale's premier application, the Catalyst EV, is a software platform that allows companies to communicate directly to the desktop of their audience in rich media format.

John: this is a comment. And this is what happens when it's on at least three lines and you can add stuff you want to say.

henericvanleuwen: this is a comment. And this is what. I can't believe it anymore.
