

Footnotes, Endnotes and Sidenotes

- supplementary content can be at the foot of the page
- or at the end of the book, or the end of the chapter
- sidenotes are possible if the margins are wide enough

Footnotes with outdented number

‘Will was a good honest fellow, but he durst have crackt a jest with him att any time.’”¹

John Shakespeare married Mary Arden, the daughter of his father’s rich landlord, probably in 1557. He had for over five years been a middleman at Stratford, dealing in the produce of his father’s farm and other farms in the

1. John Shakespeare’s father, Richard Shakespeare, was a tenant farmer, who was in 1550 renting his little farm at Snitterfield, four miles north of Stratford, from another farmer, Robert Arden of Wilmcote.